

WELCOMING A NEW ADMINISTRATION

*Commissioner-elect
John McMillan*

As you know, very soon I will be sworn in as Alabama's 25th Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries. To serve in this very important position has been a personal goal of mine for some time. And, while it took thousands of hours of hard work by me, my family, my staff and hundreds of Alabamians all across the state, when all was said and done, we were successful.

As I approach the beginning of my service as Commissioner, I would like to thank outgoing Commissioner Ron Sparks for the helpfulness and cooperation he has provided me during the transition period.

During the campaign, I made a commitment to the people of Alabama that under my direction, the Department would redouble its efforts to protect the safety of our food and water, capitalize on Alabama's sources of renewable energy, and increase our efforts to identify and control invasive species.

We also announced intentions to create a new "Farm Mentoring Program" which hopefully will provide young people the opportunity to become active in agribusiness.

As we begin a new era at the Department of Agriculture and Industries, I want to assure the people of Alabama and the employees of the department of my continued commitment to be responsive to the needs of our citizens and to reevaluate our mission, goals, and objectives.

SPARKS' REMARKS

*Commissioner
Ron Sparks*

As I have said many times before, it has been truly rewarding to work with the staff of the Department of Agriculture & Industries. They have made my job as Commissioner easier and I know they will help Commissioner-elect John McMillan's transition into office effortlessly.

I will always cherish my memories of Inauguration Day in 2003. Being able to have both of my grandmothers hold the Bible for me as I was sworn into office was incredibly special. Even though the elected officials change and the political parties may change, the emotion felt at the inauguration ceremony is a tremendous experience that is felt in much the same way by all. I hope the day is just as special for Mr.

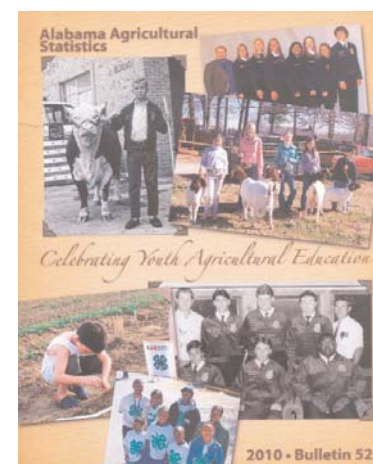

McMillan. His inauguration on January 17th, will mark a milestone in the continuation of years of progress in the state agriculture industry.

I am sure that 2011 will be another year of challenges and achievements under his leadership. With Mr. McMillan's fresh perspective, new goals and vision, and a hardworking attitude, I expect great things from this administration. I look forward to watching the employees at the Department continue to grow and do their best for Alabama agriculture. As the Department enters a new chapter in its history, I wish you all the best of luck and much success in the coming years. It has been an honor to serve the people of Alabama and I thank you for giving me the opportunity.

USDA TO SURVEY CATTLE OPERATIONS IN JANUARY

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is calling on nearly 50,000 cattle operations nationwide to report the latest and most accurate data on cattle inventories and calf production.

"The January Cattle Survey provides Alabama producers the opportunity to serve as the frontline source of data on cattle" said Bill Weaver, director of the Alabama Field Office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS). "In Alabama, we'll be contacting about 1,200 operations in order to measure trends in beef and dairy cattle inventories, calf crop and cattle operations."

To make it as easy as possible for producers to participate, NASS offers the option of responding via telephone, mail, online or personal interview with a local NASS representative.

"However producers choose to respond, they are providing an important service to the cattle industry and to U.S. agriculture as a whole," Weaver said. "Their responses will be compiled with those of their fellow producers nationwide, providing the only accurate and comprehensive estimate of the state of U.S. cattle production."

The information is a critical decision-making tool for the cattle industry, he explained. "For instance, it helps producers make informed marketing decisions and plan for herd expansion or reduction. It also helps packers and government evaluate expected slaughter volume for future months and determine potential supplies for export," Weaver said.

Survey results will be published in NASS's Cattle report, on January 28, 2011. The report will provide national-level estimates of total inventory, beef cows, milk cows, bulls, replacement heifers, other heifers, steers, calves and number of calves born during the previous year. In addition, NASS's Farms, Land in Farms, and Livestock Operations report, also published in February, will include data on the number of operations with cattle and calves, and percent of inventory by herd size.

As with all NASS surveys, information provided by respondents is confidential by law. NASS safeguards the privacy of all survey responses and publishes only aggregate data, ensuring that no individual operation or producer can be identified. All reports are available on the NASS web site: www.nass.usda.gov.

ON-LINE AGRONOMY & SOILS PROGRAM SETS SPRING CLASSES

The Auburn University Department of Agronomy and Soils is offering six online courses spring semester 2011 through its advanced-degree distance education program, in which individuals can either take single refresher courses or enroll in a graduate program to pursue a master of agriculture or a master's of science degree in agronomy and soils.

The list of spring courses includes basic crop science, basic soil science, turfgrass management, plant genetics and crop improvement, bioenergy and the environment and soil microbiology, a course that has a required lab.

The department launched the distance education program three years ago to provide professionals in such fields as agriculture, environmental management, turfgrass and golf course management and agribusinesses and those with federal and state agencies including the Alabama Cooperative Extension System and the Natural Resources Conservation Service the opportunity to take classes and earn advanced degrees while working.

Spring semester classes start Monday, Jan. 10, and students (including those in distance education) can register for classes up to 15 days after that IF the classes aren't full. Early registration is urged.

Tuition for online courses is $292 per credit hour for undergraduate-level classes and $330 per credit hour for graduate courses.

To learn more, contact Megan Ross at mhr0001@auburn.edu or 334/844-3201.

AFRICANIZED HONEY BEES

Should Alabamians be concerned?

Under some conditions, most bees and will sting to defend their nests and food reserves. Through the passing years, people have come to expect a predictable level of response from these common stinging insects when they are threatened. In 1990, a new, more defensive honey bee than the one to which we are accustomed, invaded Southern Texas and migrated East and West from that point. That type of honey bee that has been named the "Africanized honey bee" (AHB) and has spent the last twenty years establishing itself in seasonally warm areas in the US. Africanized honey bees are already established in Southern Florida and a single colony was recently discovered in Georgia. The following questions are frequently asked by concerned Alabama citizens.

1. What are the differences between Africanized honey bees (AHB) and the common honey bee?

These two kinds of bees are in the same species (Apis mellifera). While the AHB is essentially an unimproved type of the common honey bee, they still have most of the characteristics of Alabama's common honey bee. The features that trouble us is that they sting more, swarm more and generally store less surplus honey; otherwise, they are simply honey bees.

2. To cause such a stir in the media, they must be large insects.

No, in fact, the Africanized honey bee is not noticeably different than the common Alabama honey bee. Body size alone cannot be used as the primary identifying characteristic. Body color cannot be used either. Anatomical differences are important in determining whether or not a colony of bees is Africanized. The ID procedure must be performed by a trained specialist.

3. Are Africanized honey bees established in Georgia?

No. The recent find appears to have been isolated. At this time, no other AHB colonies have been found in Georgia.

4. Why are they sometimes called "Killer Bees?"

As this type of bee colonized South America many years ago, the Africanized honey bee would sometimes displace a managed colony and overtake the hive. In some instances, this bee was called Assassin Bees. As time passed, the name unfortunately became Killer Bees. These bees have attacked humans and animals, but only very rarely have deaths resulted.

5. Are these bees presently established in Alabama?

No, they are not, but regulatory authorities and Alabama beekeepers must prepare for their future arrival. Experts do expect this type bee to establish itself in some of parts of Alabama in the future.

6. Should traditional beekeeping be restricted in selected areas of Alabama where it is feared the AHB will be able to establish itself?

No. Managed bees and beekeepers help prevent the establishment and spread of the Africanized honey bee. Eliminating traditional beekeeping only allows more resources and nesting sites for unmanaged honey bees. Additionally, beekeepers are able to assist with removal and destruction of AHB swarms. Once the AHB is in an area, traditional beekeeping should be encouraged - not limited.

7. What should an individual do when confronted with a nest of Africanized honey bees?

Unless the individual has beekeeping equipment and beekeeping experience, get away from the area without disturbing the colony. Past problems have occurred when people have had health issues that prevent a hasty retreat or when individuals were very young or very old. Otherwise, use common sense. Leave the nest alone, get away from the nest and call your extension office or the Alabama Department of Agriculture for advice on nest elimination.

8. Once the AHB is established in Alabama, should outside activities be restricted?

No. Even after the Africanized bee has become established in an area, for most people, life will be exactly the same as it was before the AHB arrived. The exposure to flying honey bees will be about the same. But, as with poisonous snakes, spiders and other stinging insects, individuals should always be alert for bee flight activity and be aware that this new type of bee will sting more often and more readily.

9. Has anything been done in Alabama to deal with this potential problem?

While little can be done to actually prevent the AHB from establishing itself in Alabama, preparations and education of appropriate emergency groups have been in place for several years. The Apiary Protection Unit of the Alabama Department of Agriculture has survey lines positioned to monitor honey bee swarm movement. The Alabama Cooperative Extension System has information posted and available. Close cooperation with Florida beekeeping regulatory and extension agencies have been helpful in developing protocols for Alabama.

10. Other than become a beekeeper, what could an individual do?

When they are around honey bees, a concerned individual should just employ common sense. Once the Alabama Department of Agriculture has declared the AHB to be in a specific area, the destruction of wild honey bee nests should be left to trained individuals or selected agencies. Individual foraging honey bees on flowers are of no significant consequence, but individuals should avoid obvious nests of bees.

No one wants these bees in Alabama, but with education and experience, very few changes are expected after their arrival.

NASS Agricultural Resource Management Survey (ARMS)

Starting in January, the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) will contact farmers and ranchers across the nation to conduct the Agricultural Resource Management Survey (ARMS). This survey will provide farmers and ranchers with an opportunity to provide accurate, real-world data that will help shape the policies, programs and issues that affect them.

"ARMS asks a small, but representative, sample of farmers about their operation in order to understand the current financial state of U.S. agriculture," said Bill Weaver, director of the NASS Alabama Field Office. "Participation in ARMS is so important because government and agricultural leaders use the information needed to make sound decisions that impact the future of farmers, their families, their businesses and their communities."

The survey will be conducted between January 1 and April 30. In an effort to obtain the most accurate data, NASS will reach out to nearly 35,000 producers nationwide, including 230 in Alabama. Producers will be asked to provide data on their operating expenditures, production costs and household characteristics.

"Farm organizations, the U.S. Department of Agriculture, other government agencies, members of Congress, and State and local officials use the collective information from ARMS to answer questions and make important decisions concerning the economic viability of American agriculture, the rural economy and other emerging issues," explained Weaver

As with all NASS surveys, information provided by respondents is confidential by law. NASS safeguards the confidentiality of all responses, ensuring no individual respondent or operation can be identified.

The economic data gathered in ARMS will be published in the annual Farm Production Expenditures report on August 2, 2011. All NASS reports are available online at www.nass.usda.gov.

GEORGE M. PARIS - Inductee George Washington Carver Public Service Hall of Fame

George Paris has spent his adult life helping people on the land, whether it's helping school children learn about growing crops with the help of plasticulture, or helping their parents earn more on the farm with better marketing and production plans.

George's professional career can be seen in three parts after his graduation from Tuskegee University and service in the military. The first part, from the late sixties to the 1980's, he worked with the Federation of Southern Cooperatives (FSC). At the FSC he provided marketing assistance to farmers in Louisiana, Florida and South Carolina who had previously sold crops directly from the field, to grade, package and market their crops directly to sale outlets, bypassing the middle man. He recruited individuals for training to be employed on the Tennessee Tombigbee Waterway Construction Project, and he was also a CETA Program Director where he recruited unemployed and underemployed individuals for training opportunities.

Starting in the mid-1980's, George put his practical knowledge to work and assisted the research scientists at Tuskegee University with their on-farm agricultural experiments as the Research Farm Manager and Extension Small Farm Specialist. He also served as chair on the State Advisory Council for the Tuskegee University Cooperative Extension Program and he often presented and participated in the Tuskegee's Annual Farmers Conference and the Professional Agricultural Workers Conference.

The third part of George's career began in the early 1990's when he started working with the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries. While working for four Agricultural Commissioners, he has helped position Alabama farmers to take advantage of the benefits of plasticulture in increasing production and family income, to take advantage of direct marketing opportunities and he has spearheaded school and community gardens to promote healthy eating and income generation.

Currently, George serves the farmers and consumers of Alabama as Division Director for the Agriculture Protection Division. In this capacity, he directs activities for several major components within the department including, Mediation, Market News, Seed Lab, Farmer's Market, Ag Promotions, Genetically Modified Seeds, Agriculture Economics and Petroleum Commodities.

George also volunteers to help his fellow man locally where he has been a board member of Community Resource Group assisting on water, waste water and housing for poor families; and for the past 20 years he has developed and implemented an Alabama Black Belt Service Learning Program for students of Gettysburg College. Internationally he has worked in the Bahamas, Senegal, South Africa, Nicaragua, Zimbabwe and Cuba helping farmers organize cooperatives and develop marketing and sale plans for agricultural produce.

George has been recognized for his service to the USDA National Small Farm Conference, the Alabama Cooperative Extension System and the Oklahoma Black Historical Research Project, Inc. In 2005, George was awarded the T.M. Campbell Distinguished Leadership Award at Tuskegee's Annual Farmers Conference.

In 2010, at the Annual Professional Agriculture Workers Conference at Tuskegee University, he was honored by being inducted into the prestigious George Washington Carver Public Service Hall of Fame.
